MR. ROBERTSON'S TOUR.

Mr. Robertson's speech, at the dinner given in his honour, which we reproduced in our issue of Saturday, was of considerable interest. To in his homour, which we reproduced in our issue of Saturday, was of considerable interest. To much of it no exception could be taken: the speaker obviously held as a good Radical that the best elements of the nation were to be found in the Radical party, a point of view, which—mutatis mutandis—is not rare smong Conservatives We are quite in agreement with Mr. Robertson's dictum that in international relations, friendliness and sympathy count for much, and that it is in the interest both of England and Egypt that acquaintance should be rendered as close and pleasant as is possible. At the same time we are—to tell the truth—ightly anused by the opening of Mr. Robertson's speech. We quite understand that he grateful to our confree'n sceid, linguistic and don't interest the same time we are—to tell the truth—ightly anused by the opening of Mr. Robertson's speech. We quite understand that he grateful to our confree'n sceid, linguistic and admit that our confree'n social, linguistic admit that our confree'n sensial, linguistic particular of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the views of the party which he exponent of the views of the views of the views of the vi Mentor. An Egyptian visitor to England who took, say, the Editor of the "Daily Mail" for his "guide, philosopher, and friend," or, going to the extreme, sought coufuel and information-from the Editor of "Reynolds' Newsformation-from the Editor of "Reynolds' Newspaper," would in either case return to Alexandria or-Port Said with a songewhat lop-andria or-Port Said with a songewhat lop-andria or-Port Said with a songewhat lop-andria or-port said with a stream of facts exclusively supplied by the Editor of "Al Minbar." In swing this we do not wish to cast the alightest supersion on the good faith of our confrère, but torinsist on the somewhat obvious truth that the version of facts—notably in political questions—given by any individual must be largely dependent on the personal equation. However, Mr. Robertson will doubtless some neighber us on this question, and we look forward with interest to the results of his Egyptian tour.

THE PROBLEM OF EGYPT.

THE PROBLEM OF EGYPT.

The most important article in the last "Edinburgh Review" is a careful study of the new problem which faces Lord Cromer in Egypt. Formerly the task of the British Administration was to give peace and prosperity to the land Now this has been accomplished, and the result has been the growth of Egyptian nationalism. The material progress of the people, however, having outrun their moral and intellectual growth, we find that their aspirations naturally do not correspond to their political capacity. The true policy is to recognise what merit there may be in the new feeling, and to give this national priris all the scope which is consistent with the preservation of the advantages which the British Administration has conferred. The writer shows how the representative principle is even now sdmitted in Egyptian administration, and how no Englishman is appointed to a poet which can be competently filled by an Egyptian, This principle may be extended, and while ordinary constitutional government, would be out of the question, it might be possible to do much in the way of developing self-government in the municipalities. The three dangerque forces—nationalism, but Andjolphob Arab Press, and Pan-Islamism—may be counteracted by an itelligent liberalism in the Administration, Pan-Islamism-may be counteracted by intelligent liberalism in the Administrati and by the growth of progressive ideas amor the Mohamedans themselves,

THE KHEDIVE.

THE KHEDIVE.

The celebration of the anniversary of the Khedive's accession is thus commented on by Mr. Edward Dicesop in the "Daily Telegraph":—On Tuesday his Highness the Khedive celestated the fifteenth anniversary of his accession to the Viceregal throne. If "Whitaker's correct, and any doubt as to its infallibility is correct, and any doubt as to its infallibility is to my mind a pestilent heresy, abbase Pasha Hilmi is now a man of thirty-three, that is, in the very prime of life, Judged by ordinary Oriental standards, he has been an intelligent, active, and popular riter. From the outset, however, of his reign the Khedive has had little or no chances of showing his ability as an administrator, and in consequence has a series of Sovereign power must be taken mainly upon credit. Year after year, under our virtual protestorate, his Highness's authority as the nominal Sovereign of Egypt has been diminished rather by general causes than by any deliberate design. His personal relations with our British authorities have gradually become, of not less cordial, certainly less intimate. He lives mainly at his Palace of Koubbsh, some half-dozen miles away from Cairc, on the outskirts of the Sues Desert. He hardly ever passes a night in law jugo barrack-like Palace of Abdeen, the last, I think, of the numerous palaces built by his grandfather in or near the capital which now remains intact. In the old pre-occupation era the Khedives were in fact, as well as in name, the fountains of honour, passes unit by an grandiather in or near the capital which now remains intact. In the ole pre-occupation era the Khedives were in fact as well as in name, the fountains of honour pre-occupation ora the Khedives were in fact, as well as in name, the fountains of honour, the distributors of rewards and punishmenta, and their residences were crowded daily by petitioners, augplaints, and persons with grievances, who, according to immemorial usages, had full and free right of access to their presence. All this is changed to-day, and the visitors to Koubbeh are comparatively few in number. I fancy, however, that during the year just ended a variety of circumstances, familiar to all persons sequainted with modern Egypt, have led to an impression that, under certain not altogether improbable contingencies, his Highness may play hereafter a sometime to the second of Egypt than he has played of late, and this impression has led all those who are dissatisfied with the present political conditions of the country to look upon Abbas II, as the possible figurehead of a so far leaderless movement. Neither I, nor anyone, can say with certainty whether his Highness views the vague and impracticable ideas of the Egyptian Nationalists with favour or disfavour, but, in any case, the favour must necessarily be of a very platonic kind.

It is said that most Oldham spinning companies have now large inner reserve funds. The trade outlook is better than at the close of last year.

The annual carnival often fornishes an excess to a certain class of the population to indulge in practices which can only be described as reprehensible. One of these practices is the indiscriminate throwing from the windows of houses or in the atreets of missiles of all kinds, likely in many cases to rigare the passers by. The Alexandria Gouvernorst authorities make a pressing appeal to the public, on the approach of these fetses, to case the practice, which degenerates into a sandalona abone. The fears that were expressed a few years ago as to the rossibility of Pert Sai't tyalling and eventually displacing. Alexandria as the first port of Exprt are quite groundless. From 1900 to 1906 Port Said's trae's increased by 47 per cent, while that of Alexandria increased by 47 per cent, while that of Alexandria increased at Alexandria in 1905 was 1. E. 19 (66.38; and J. #### REVIEW OF THE SITUATION.

A review of the trade of Baypt during the past few years has become a monotonous roiteration of continued success. Nothing cocours to check its steady expansion, and it would be difficult to imagine a calculity of efficient importance to disturb its colid foundation. The Nile flood may be lower in one year than another, or it may exceed the average, but in either case the damage done is not really vary seriour, and anyhow the annual flood can be always depended on be optivide sefficient irrigation for most of the coltivated land. The rapid rise of land values in recent years was quickly followed by greatly increased prices paid for the outon crop, and but hee movement a produced an accumulation of much health to landed proprietors, outlivators, and most other classes. A domand for better housing accommodation soon began, and this last acting rapidly, owing to various change who himsted the annual migration to E rope for he register in such a state of the contraction of fravel in other countries, the greater freedom given to the Mohamedan ladies, the surrent of education, and the attractions to village notables of resilence in Csir or other dities falling in the countries, they will be willed in the contraction to village notables of resilence in Csir or other dities. Old dwellings were demolished in every direction and replaced by large blocks of flate fitted with modern scaling populances, electric bells, and faciby large blooks of flats fitted with modera sonitary appliances, electric bells, and faci-lities for gas or electric lighting. Egyp-tians were no longer afraid to display their wealth, and took rather a notarral delight in octabining one another in the splendour of their foreign horses, carriages, or other novel possessions.

Modern Egypt, therefore, may be said to have more advanced notions of civilization than most of the States of Southern and Bastera Europe, and her requirements will be drawn more and more from the country best fitted to supply them intelligently.

FINANCING THE COTTON CROP.

First come the Corron Chor.

The one-tomary financial arrangements to deal with the cotton crop were quite inadequate this season, and all calculations based on past experience were upset owing to the unexpected fervour with which the fallabeen reahed into the market to avail themselves of the remarkably high prices reling at the beginning of the season. A scarcity of gold in alexandria resulting from the operation of lifting the crop is predicted every year, but rarely provided for; this season the situation was strained to an acute degree early in Normber, and the bank were forced to make hasty demands for further supplies. But the roop was found to be larger than usual, and the high prices were estacily maintained; consequently sales were made to an abnormal extent, and the gold reserves were once more anhanted early in December. The banks complained that the gold had not been filtering back from the provinces with its nearl expending the the three days of the trouble would appear to be the inability of their head offices in London to realis the situation, and possibly their unwillingness to follow the spot. Speciation is an executal feature of the trade, and it is the primary casis of the marvellous increase is the value of the Egyptian cotton crop for the lest three or f or years. It is not difficult to calculate that the sale of the present cop will result in a net gain to the agricultural community of at least five millions storling in excess of last year's prefits, and this will have a far-reaching effect on the trade of the country. The fellisheen are indeed the most prosperous farmers in the

Their taxtion is so light as to be searcaly felt, and the Government continues a policy of remitting taxe, standily every year although it is generally consider et that the money threby involved might be better applied to the exacution and extension of public works. Fraporest Lexislature Institutions
The creation of a large nemoes of jint stock companies during the past five years has been the means of drawing more general attention to legal questions. Egypt possesses nose of the ordinary mochinery for general legislation, and under the clairing system it is impossible to adapt its laws to the growing requirement as of the country. The day has arrived when he had to the Capitulations must be excipatedly and, in his an und report published has April he separated by institutions. He also invited the local Press and Chambers of Commerce to express their opinions on the subject. Perhaps the most interesting of Lod Uromer's preposals is the result of the provide the control of subjects of the Powers which were provided to the control of a separate legit lative control composed of subjects of the Powers which were parties to the nut-titution of the mixed tribunals. Legislation passed by a mjurity of this control, and promulgated by the Egyptian Government, which he accept to the foreign representation in Egypt. The exacting Coordination of the whole plan is that the Powers, with the exception of Great Britain, will cose to accorde any legislative function; and the post of the proper and the present privileges, and are unwilling to present privileges, and are unwilling to consider any proposed change which might tend to limit them. The meat absolute goalston that the little function of the british Government to take the engineer of the present privileges, and are unwilling to consider any proposed change which might tend to limit them. The e was a marked improvement in last nightly "Lobe g in" over previous performances, periouslay as regards the first wo note, which were very smoothly In both contrast of the last set, there we rether a falling away: the orchesters at these we rether a falling away: the orchesters, already cantering at the start, wast off at a go lop, at at times rether disconcered the shura. Signa Grisi, too, as Eles, was consistently in too greats hurry and now and agains sittle falt, but otherwise fairly good. Sig. Marcolin's Lobengrin calls for ittle comment. There were so many outs in Telramend's part that Sig. Berriel had hardly cough for his vigorous acting. By far the best in the cast and nearest to Wagnerian requirements was Signa. Cholk wik's Ortrod, the "woman who does not know tow." This was a must telling piece of work as regards signgs, acting and appearance. Sig. Contini, as Heinrich der Vogler, was also work as regards aigngs, acting and appearance. Signatiny well in Act. I. The band, as we have said, lefts good deal to be desired; they were wanting both in vigorr and feeling. We should also remark that the female choras was too sudden and shrill, and we wish they would realise that their frivility is somewhat misplaced in the solemanty of this drama. But my be a superspace where the contracts are more than soffi iently long to answer this purpose.

TO OUR VISITORS.

The Equptian Gayette has much pleasure in presenting to its subscribers the accompanying deepen to the subscribers the accompanying deepen to the property of the property of

This depends partly upon the month in which you leave Eypyt, for Cairo in January may be a little warmer then the Riviers, and possibly not so warm as Sielly, but in March it will be warmer than Rome, and more uniformly warm than many other places in Europe. Many people leave Egypt far too early in the year, for as a rule the weather in April and May is perfect. The warmer place to go to on leaving Egypt is Sicily.

Some will want to take into consideration the number of days to be spent at see, and we therefore subjoin a list showing the time compled on cach of the various rootes between Egypt and the Continent of Europe.

They are as follows:—
The long sea routes—from Port Said or Alexandria to Plymouth, Southampton, London or Liverpool—occupy about 14 days. The short ones are as follows:—

The steamers of the P. & O., North German Lloyd, Orient, and Messageries Maritimes are the largest. The Anchor, British India, Bibby and Hendemon Lines are also accellent, and their steamers are largely patronised by travellers to Egypt.

As regards the train journeys from Cairo, the shortest is that to Alexandria, without change in the shortest is that to Alexandria, without change in 4 hours.

The least expensive way to Enghand is by the Moss, Papayanni, Prince, and Westcott lines of steamers from Alexandria to Liverpool. The German Levant line has also good steamers from Alexandria to Hamburg.

The quickest through Continental routes are by P. & O. Brindisi express from Port Said, and the Austrian Lloyd Trieste-Vienna express from Alexandria.

The quickest manner of getting to Europe from Port Said is undoubtedly by the fast Mail Steamers "Osiris" and "Isis" to Brindisi. One of these leaves Port Said every week, as soon as possible after receiving the Indian mails from the great liner arrived from Bombay.

These small but comfortable ships have snormously powerful engines, and attain a very high rate of speed. They are called the Ferry boats, having been specially built to carry the British mail from Fort Said to carry the British indi the train waiting at Brindship of the British was will be to carry the British indi the train waiting at the said of the British was sufficient to the said of the said

The total absence of vehicular traffic strikes one as very and most delightful place and most delightful place absence of vehicular traffic strikes one as very strange; no horse, cart, carriage or biyele it to be seen, and yet there is the sound of life at every turn.
